CEN/TS 17830:2022 (E)Introduction

Clause 5.2 of EN 643:2014 excludes “prohibited materials” as defined in Clause 2.2 without providing any kind of tolerance. This is an important quality requirement to avoid any hazard for safety, health and environment as well as to make clear that paper and board for recycling is a quality material and not a channel to dispose of any refuse.

Clause 2.2 of EN 643:2014 defines as prohibited material “any materials which represent a hazard for health, safety and environment, such as medical waste, contaminated products of personal hygiene, hazardous waste, organic waste including foodstuffs, bitumen, toxic powders and similar”. It can be interpreted that this list is par lance and that products of the mentioned groups are meant, disregarding whether they are “waste” or not. This guidance document addresses two topics related to this definition of prohibited materials, i.e. the presence of foodstuff and products of personal hygiene.

This document is intended to assist the users of EN 643 to more clearly understand what is meant by the terms “prohibited materials” and which materials might be limited accepted in paper and board for recycling.

1 Scope

This document provides guidance on the interpretation of Clause 2.2 “prohibited materials” of EN 643:2014 and provides definitions and examples to help the users to meet EN 643 requirements. It does not add to, subtract from, or in any way modify the requirements of the EN 643 standard. This document does not prescribe mandatory approaches to implementation.

This document does not modify Clause 5.2 of EN 643.
